The Office of Letters and Light Announces SCRIPT FRENZY 2008

The 100-page challenge designed to inspire everyone who's ever aspired to write a script

Oakland, Calif.---www.ScriptFrenzy.org---February 1, 2008 – Oakland-based non-profit the Office of Letters and Light today announced the second annual Script Frenzy challenge, set to take place in April. Script Frenzy is an international writing event in which participants attempt the creatively daring feat of writing 100 pages of original material for a script or scripts in a single month. Screenplays, stage plays, TV shows, short films, comic book scripts, and adaptations of novels are all welcome.

The Office of Letters and Light charges no fee to participate in Script Frenzy; no valuable prizes are awarded or best scripts singled out. In order to “win” at Script Frenzy, you need only sign up and complete the goal of writing 100 pages in 30 days. In return for their efforts, Script Frenzy winners are granted a Script Frenzy Winner's Certificate, web icon, and eternal bragging rights.

Last year over 8,000 participants took part in the challenge, and this year 10,000 are expected, making it the largest scriptwriting contest in the world. Many Script Frenzy participants will be right in your backyard, gathering together in local cafes and libraries for official Script Frenzy write-ins.

Kids and teens can also get in on the act through Script Frenzy's Young Writers Program. The Young Writers Program is a separate online and offline challenge for budding scriptwriters, with special resources for students and teachers.

Sign-ups are taking place now. Please contact Jennifer Arzt if you're interested in hearing more about Script Frenzy, or visit the event website at www.ScriptFrenzy.org.

About the Office of Letters and Light

In 1999, freelance writer Chris Baty was a man with a dream—a dream to write a novel in just thirty days. Ten years, billions of words, and endless amounts of coffee later, National Novel Writing Month has become the largest writing competition in the world. Chris founded the nonprofit Office of Letters and Light in 2006 to run National Novel Writing Month and launch new events, such as Script Frenzy. In addition to inspiring people everywhere, the mission of the Office of Letters and Light is to build community and foster literacy. To that end, the Office has contributed to the construction of 24 libraries in Southeast Asia, and sponsors writing programs for kids and teachers. For more information about all of their programs, visit www.LettersandLight.org.
